

College counselors serve as academic advisors for students who are UNDECIDED about their academic major. This means your "declared major" is "undecided." You may not have chosen a career field; you have not chosen a particular academic program; or you are not certain whether you want to earn a certificate, diploma, two-year degree and/or four-year degree. Your counselor will advise you regarding courses to take while you are "undecided" and will help you reach a decision. If you are UNDECIDED about your major, please see the list of advisors above. Note that you may select the campus most convenient for you. Once you decide on a formal major, we will refer you to an Orientation Center where you will be assigned to an academic advisor for that course of study.

If you have declared a major (any certificate, diploma, or degree program) but, for whatever reason, remain UNCERTAIN about some of your academic, career, and/or college goals, then you should do two things. First, as far as our advising services are concerned you are not "undecided," so you should contact an Orientation Center for assignment to an appropriate faculty academic advisor for the course of study that you have initially identified as your major. Then, contact Counseling and Career Development Services staff at one of the following offices for assistance in becoming more "certain" of your academic, career, and/or college goals.
